missiles and, Western officials believe, possibly as many as 150 Scud-type surface-to-surface missiles.

Militarily, Saddam is in no position to take on the Americans and their allies again after his forces were severely mauled in the 1991 Gulf War.

For one thing, an Iraqi military response would expose the military and economic infrastructure the Iraqis have so painstakingly - and proudly - rebuilt since Allied warplanes and missiles flattened it during the war.

But, faced with a worsening economic squeeze because of 2½ years of U.N. sanctions, the Iraqi leader may be seeking a diversion to rally Iraqis behind his beleaguered regime.

Saddam may also be hoping to exploit divisions within the wartime coalition that Bush stitched together to liberate Kuwait.

The Arab allies, in particular, fear that further pressure on Baghdad could lead to the disintegration of Iraq, with its volatile ethnic mix.

Saddam could try to knock down some allied aircraft to avenge the MiG-25 shot down Dec. 27 by a U.S. F-16 over the "no-fly zone" imposed last August on southern Iraq.

His air defenses, which accounted for nearly all the 41 allied warplanes lost in the Persian Gulf conflict, remain potent despite war damage.

But his severely depleted air force, down to 150 to 200 warplanes from a prewar strength of 700, is unlikely to fare any better against the high-tech allies than it did in the Gulf War.

Saddam could launch Scuds against the allies' airbases in Saudi Arabia at Dhahran and Riyadh, or at targets further south along the gulf.

But that would leave him dangerously exposed to retaliation by Allied air power, with its precision-guided "smart" weapons, and long-range Tomahawk cruise missiles aboard U.S. warships in the gulf. These weapons wreaked havoc in Iraq during the war.

Between Jan. 17 and Feb. 26, 1991, Saddam fired more than 80 Scuds or the longer-range Iraqi-built variants, all notoriously inaccurate, at Saudi Arabia and Israel.

Saddam remains defiant.

The allied bombing was a limited action, confined to military targets and posing no direct threat to the safety of Saddam, hundreds of miles away in Baghdad.

The United States said the strike was designed to spare civilian casualties.

Baghdad radio reported the raids killed one soldier and three civilians were killed in a residential area near a petrochemical complex. The report also said three soldiers and four civilians were wounded.

Bush said the strike demonstrated "we are serious" in demanding that Saddam comply with U.N. resolutions that set terms at the end of the Gulf War.

"You've got to do what you have to do," he said. Bush said it did not matter that the bombing came just one week before he leaves office.

"I'm president until the 20th and I will run the foreign policy and make these kind of decisions as long as I'm president," he said.

In London, Prime Minister John Major said the world was growing increasingly intolerant of Saddam's defiance.

Professors back air strike

By JOHN FERAH
Campus editor

Three members of Eastern's political science department and an Eastern history professor say they feel the move Wednesday by President Bush to permit air strikes against Iraq by U.S.-led U.N. forces was justified after several months of outward defiance by Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein.

"I think the decision made by Bush was largely a demonstration of will and probably won't be an on-going situation like the Gulf War," said John Faust, a political science professor who visited post-war Kuwait last summer.

"The Bush administration believed something needed to be done because of Hussein's defiance of the United Nations laws already sanctioned against Iraq," he said.

Faust added that President Bush and President-elect Clinton worked together to make sure Iraq does not deviate from the restrictions the United Nations placed upon it.

"Psychologically, Bush probably saw Saddam Hussein as still being a threat, and this time the United Nations decided to act," Faust said. "I think everybody's still waiting to see what's going to happen."

Another political science professor, Abdul Lateef, said he was not surprised by Wednesday's events in the Middle East and speculated the incident may have actually been a "blessing in disguise for the incoming Clinton administration."

"Clinton's people may be relieved now that this decision didn't have to be made by him, ultimately," Lateef said. "Clinton should know, though, that his job as president is not just domestically, it deals with foreign affairs as well."

"The missile strike was probably something President Bush felt he needed to do," Lateef said. "Saddam Hussein feels the U.N. is interfering with its internal affairs."

He also mentioned a personal conflict between President Bush and Saddam Hussein may have played a role in the decision to order the strike.

"There might be a personal dissatisfaction of Bush by Hussein," Lateef said. "Hussein brought the missiles into southern Iraq and violated the 'no-fly zone' imposed on him by the United Nations."

"It's hard to tell whether or not the Iraqi people agree or disagree with some of Hussein's policies," he said. "Maybe many Iraqis would like to see him go. The air strikes are justified, and I'd be happy to have him disappear from the political scene."

Andrew McNitt, political science professor, said he felt a conflict with Hussein and the United Nations was probably inevitable.

"I think that the problem with Hussein might be an on-going event because probably missed their opportunity to get rid of him after the Gulf War," McNitt said.

Representative quiet on BOG

By SHERRY SIDWELL
Student government editor

Eastern's student representative to the Board of Governors declined to say Wednesday whether or not he actually supports a higher education task force's recommendation to eliminate Eastern's governing body.

The task force issued a report Jan. 6 to the governor and state General Assembly suggesting the elimination of the BOG and the Board of Regents in favor of individual governing boards at each school. Together, the two boards oversee eight Illinois state universities.

"As a member of the BOG, I can't really say whether or not I'm in favor of the proposal," said Tony Wielt, Student Senate's BOG representative. "But as a student, I'm in favor of an investigation to find out what would be cheaper to the students. If a board for each school is cheaper, then I'm all for it."

Wielt said he doesn't know if eliminating the BOG will actually save students and taxpayers any money.

"If you get rid of the BOG, each school will have its own governing board," he said. "I don't know if having seven or eight boards will really be any cheaper than what we already have."

The BOG oversees Eastern, Chicago State, Governors State, Northeastern Illinois and Western Illinois universities. The Board of Regents oversees Illinois State, Northern Illinois and Southern Illinois universities.

State Rep. Mike Weaver, R-Ashmore, commented earlier this week that the BOG is "only another layer of bureaucracy".

Wielt said, "As far as (Weaver's comment) goes, it is true. The BOG oversees the schools and then makes recommendations on the schools to the Illinois Board of Higher Education."

Wielt said he is not concerned with fears that elimination of the BOG would concentrate more power in the hands of the IBHE, giving it the power it is currently trying to obtain from the state General Assembly to cut academic programs.

"If the IBHE is the only governing body, it will have the only say and be able to make its own rules, but I don't believe (eliminating the BOG) will give the IBHE any more authority," he said. "If the BOG is cut, each school will then have its own board to oversee things."

"The advantage of individual governing boards would be that each school's board could ask for just what its own school needs, while the BOG acts in favor of all the schools," he said.

Wielt said even if the Gov. Jim Edgar and the state General Assembly approve a bill dissolving both boards, he does not see any change actually taking place before 1994 or early 1995.

Lt. Gov. Bob Kustra and IBHE Chair Arthur Quern co-chaired the task force, which has been studying Illinois' higher education structure since early last spring.

Registration fee has no purpose in current form

The advance deposit system currently used by the university should be altered, if not cut out altogether. Some students at Eastern don't have to pay the fee, while others do.

It makes no sense to have an advance deposit system if only some students are forced to use it from it.

Most of the students currently enrolled at Eastern have paid the $100 required advance registration deposit in one form or another. Some students drained their pockets for the money or have gained it from their parents.

However, some students went to the Registration Office and asked that the deposit be waived because they have a full paid scholarship.

The advance deposit is required to weed out the non-serious students from the student who are serious about attending Eastern, said Michael Taylor, director of registration. He also said "waiving the students with full paid scholarships saves time in the end of having to refund the $100 fee."

But every student, who even considers registering for any university, is serious in some way or another about something. It is not a relevant excuse to send students through the task of having to scrape up $100 because the registration office deems it necessary to be judge and jury about who is serious and who is not.

The tuition to attend Eastern—one of the lowest costing schools in the state—is not that phenomenal. But the tuition is enough for a student to take their classes seriously. An advanced $100 deposit is not going to make a difference.

Using the fact that the $100 registration fee weeds out students who are more serious about attending Eastern and further leaving more seats open for those students who want an education is nothing but a bunch of red tape.

It seems the waiver just makes it easier for the students who have more money to spend, rather than waiving it for the non-scholarship students who have trouble making ends meet.

Although disadvantaged students deserve the opportunity to attend Eastern without the trial and tribulation of petty costs, by that same token, so do students whose parents may be

Textbook rental favors Eastern

I have grown to appreciate the advantages of the Textbook Rental System since I came to Eastern from a Big Ten University six years ago.

Habits learned by faculty as students 30 years ago, and instructional methods modeled by their professors, no longer meet the needs of today's students. Then, most undergraduates were single, living on campus and between 18 to 23 years old. Now, 80 percent of the 12 million students currently enrolled are "non-traditional" students.

For example, the students are now more often adults age 25 or older, married, living off campus or commuting to classes. Learning as a method of maturation and experience has been replaced by continual, lifelong learning required to maintain one's occupation or to retool for a career change.

Many faculty need to review what is necessary to effectively instruct such "new" students. These students are unwilling to sit passively and listen to "authority." They want to interact, work cooperatively and apply their classroom knowledge to immediate, practical issues. These students resist being forced to purchase texts from esoteric courses which hold no interest beyond meeting a graduation requirement.

With Eastern's textbook system, both graduates and undergraduates can purchase books which are personally meaningful to them without being gouged via the "buy-back" process, and can select a library meeting their personal specifications rather than those of diffuse instructors.

The mission of Eastern is to emphasize quality instruction, not to produce impressive amounts of new knowledge. The Textbook Rental System is one visible way this institution symbolically identifies quality instruction as a focus of our mission because it strategically positions us in the public's perception as an institution unique from other, state-assigned schools.

Charles Eberly

It underscores Eastern's commitment to make aspects of our educational offerings as affordable accessible to the people of Illinois as possible. Symbols of our investment in quality instruction are nificant to our primary audience. As a freshman senior instructor, I have been impressed by the number of students who were initially attracted to Eastern because of the rented textbook option, what that signified about this institution's "understanding" of financial sacrifices necessary for higher education.

Academic reasons for continuing the system include support of the General Education Integrated Core. Without the system, the substance of the unified general education core will be diffused into a series of specialized faculty special interest courses, which become as fragmented as the curriculum this faculty abandoned.

At my former university, I witnessed the diffusion of a solid general education program into a series of vague special interest seminars.

Not only does the Textbook Rental System support the Integrated Core, but all instruction, by providing uniform texts throughout all multiple section courses, it the professor, or the text, with whose words the students will spend the most time?

The Priorities, Quality and Productivity Initiative makes it imperative that benefits to be gained from instruction be measurable. With common texts across all course sections, common final exams can provide concrete student outcome data. Unlike many other institutions, Eastern can quantitatively support the quality of its offerings.

Of course, this rationale also fits assessment needs identified within the review of the undergraduate major. With the system as a foundation, our faculty can assess the impact of the curriculum which has been laboriously developed.

Perot, the feistiest mutt in politics

Editor's note: The following editorial is from Northern Illinois University's daily student newspaper, The Northern Star.

Those who thought the election's outcome would rid them of Ross Perot had better look again.

Perot still is making headlines long after the remnants from the election have fallen. Perot's latest idea, announced Monday, is to form United We Stand, America. The idea of the group is to form a political watchdog organization that would blanket the entire nation and force politicians to think twice before doing anything that would jeopardize people.

The organization cannot do any harm, so why not give Perot and his backers a chance to make the government listen to the people? He was, after all, the one who brought the deficit into the limelight. He made politicians from both the local and national levels address an issue about which people really care.

Experts claim that Perot's organization of this group is only to help his election bid in 1996. If that's the truth, what's the problem with a politician proving early to his constituents that he will not change things for the better? There cannot be any harm in forcing politicians to take credit for their actions and stop any scandal before it erupts.

Guest viewpoint

Perot hit the nail on the head when he pointed out that America cannot wait four years to rid itself of its economic woes. The drive that Perot is making for people become involved in this new watchdog organization shows his intentions are good.

While Perot is becoming America's watchdog, may President-elect Bill Clinton had better watch him before the next election.

Police hold a mixed bag in fiscal reports

By BRIAN HUCHEL
Staff writer

The University Police Department has been left holding a mixed bag as figures in a recently published report show a decrease in monetary losses for Bond Revenue-General Funds and an increase in dollar losses from stolen property in the area of Faculty, staff, students and visitors to the university.

According to police figures, monetary losses in the Bond Revenue-General Funds decreased $3,633 the first quarter of the 1991-92 fiscal year, down from $8,553 to 4,920.

In addition, Bond Revenue-General Funds losses also decreased in the second quarter, dropping from $13,489 during the 1991-92 fiscal year to $8,448 in the 1992-93 fiscal year.

In contrast to the dropping monetary losses in Bond Revenue-General Funds are the subsequent increases in the monetary losses in the Faculty-Staff-Student-Visitors area.

For example, a bicycle's estimated value is accumulated in this type of report. During the first quarter of the 1992-93 fiscal year, there was a slight increase of only $138.

Through the months of October, November and December, however, there was a substantial increase of over $4,000, which settled at a total of $13,778.

These compiled figures include losses encountered during Class 1 criminal offenses. These offenses occur the human life is put in danger, or money is stolen.

Campus police turns people charged with these offenses over to the Coles County Police Department.

Lesser offenses such as an altered or stolen student permit is handled by Keith Kohanzo and the Judicial Affairs office.

The University Police Department's generated revenue from parking and other types of fines has also decreased since the previous fiscal report. Money brought in through these three sources is handled by the Business Affairs Office.

"The income accumulated through fees, fines and parking meters is not a small amount," said Suzanne Chouinard, assistant to Vice President for Business Affairs Charles Colbert.

"We are predicting a grand total of approximately $375,000 by the year's end," she said. "This total is without the parking meters surrounding the Union, which the Union handles."

"The money accumulated through the parking detail is put into a parking entity," Chouinard added. "It is a local account that is not used for anything but the upkeep and building of lots."

Retirees await bill's passage

By DAVID M. PUTNEY
Staff writer

Now that the university employees' early retirement bill has passed the General Assembly and awaits the Governor's signature, the State Universities Retirement System and schools are trying to figure how it will affect them.

The bill has not yet reached Gov. Jim Edgar's desk. When it does, he will have 60 days to sign it before the measure becomes law, an Edgar spokeswoman said.

If Edgar signs it, 5,000 university employees statewide would be eligible for early retirement.

At Eastern, 150 individuals would be eligible for the program, said Dennis Spice, State Universities Retirement System executive director.

Pat Hill, Eastern employee benefits manager, said she doesn't know if any Eastern workers will take advantage of the program or if it will provide enough of an incentive for senior employees to leave in significant numbers.

The General Assembly essentially revamped a university early retirement program that had been on the books for 11 years, but did not increase benefits.

Employees between 55 and 60 years old with at least eight years of service could step down early without having to pay 7 percent of their highest annual salary as a penalty.

Eligible employees must apply between July 1 and June 30, 1994. The employer can limit this benefit to 15 percent of those eligible, with higher seniority employees getting preference.

The program probably won't clear university employment rolls of higher-paid, long-term employees as lawmakers intended.

Spice said the Retirement System's proposed "10 and 30" plan might have, but American Federation of State County and Municipal Employees opposition succeeded in cutting out all of the financial incentives of the Retirement System's plan, Spice said.

"The bill didn't increase the annuity," Spice said. "And the state university system annuity isn't that good."

The "10 and 30" program favored by the Retirement System cost of the least of any legislative proposals and would have given retirees a 10 percent increase in benefits.

The program's cost will be borne by the universities, and Retirement System's cost would be the same whether a person retired early or at 65. Spice said if all 500 who are eligible opt to retire, universities will have to pay $21 million to cover the worker's 7 percent penalty.

The university early retirement program, part of an omnibus early retirement pension bill, passed the state House and Senate easily Tuesday night, the last full day of the General Assembly's session.

The bill was hammered out after several hours of discussion by House leadership and pension experts and was the last substantive piece of legislation to pass this session.

The short deadline near the close of the session didn't allow for the Retirement System to fight for a better benefit package, Spice said.

Pro-life efforts upheld in ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal judges cannot stop protesters who try to block women's access to abortion clinics, the Supreme Court ruled Wednesday.

The 5-4 decision, a victory for Operation Rescue and other anti-abortion protesters, means clinic operators must turn to state courts for help in thwarting blockades.

But the ruling's impact may be blunted by President-elect Clinton.

A president has the power to order federal protection without any court injunction. President Dwight D. Eisenhower did so when he ordered National Guard protection of students during racial-integration efforts in the 1950s.

And federal law authorizes state officials lacking the resources to cope with massive lawlessness to seek federal law-enforcement help if they cannot "protect the lives and property of citizens or ... enforce the criminal law."

The ruling does not alter the core constitutional right of abortion, reaffirmed by the court in a landmark decision last June.

At issue, instead, was the Ku Klux Klan Act of 1871 and its ban on conspiracies aimed at violating the constitutional rights of a "protected class" of people, such as blacks.

New loan provides fresh aid

By DAWN TESSENDORF
Staff writer

Middle-income students who cannot qualify for Stafford loans may receive two new unsubsidized federal loans from the Illinois Student Assistance Commission.

The loans were created to help students and families who previously were denied a Stafford loan.

Stafford loans are available, but the new loan is an alternative for students who need financial assistance, even after receiving grants and scholarships.

The commission has yet to name the two new loans.

The unsubsidized loans differ from the Stafford loan in how the students pay off the interest.

The subsidized Stafford Loan's interest is paid after the student graduate. The unsubsidized loans' interest is paid by the students while they are still attending classes.

Both the federal Stafford loan and the unsubsidized loan interest is starting at 6.94 percent for most new borrowers.

Student Senate seats still open

By SHERRY SIDWELL
Student government editor

Student Senate is busy making plans for spring semester, the first of which is to take applications to fill five empty seats.

Speaker of the Senate Luke Neumann said the senate has five vacant chairs, which it plans to fill during the next two weeks.

"We have people of real quality in the senate now," Neumann said. "We're taking applications and looking for people of similar quality to fill the vacancies."

Housing Fest, scheduled for Feb. 11, will be held in the Grand Ballroom of the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union.

"We've invited local realtors to come to Eastern to speak on off-campus housing," Neumann said.

He said students will have the opportunity to ask questions about housing and learn about the responsibilities of living in an apartment.

In addition, the senate will host a "Sweep the City" event later this spring. Neumann said campus organizations will be asked to clean up Fourth and Sixth streets as they march from Old Main to the Charleston Square.

"We held an event like this last year and it was extremely successful," Neumann said.

The senate has not yet set a date

The senate also plans to sponsor cultural diversity roundtables throughout the semester. Beginning at the end of January or early February, members of Student Government and representatives of the diverse cultural groups on campus will visit the residence halls on request to speak on cultural and racial issues.

"The roundtable will speak mainly about the diversity of races on campus," Neumann said. "This will be done with an eye toward making sure everyone feels comfortable with each other and learning to get along."

Teacher named to fashion final

By ABBY KRAKOW
Staff writer

Although Jean Dilworth is known to her students as only a home economics teacher, she has been chosen as a fashion design finalist for two consecutive years at the International Textile and Apparel Association Design Competition.

Last October, Dilworth, assistant professor of home economics, was selected as a finalist by the association for a formal occasion dress she designed and modeled.

Textile and Apparel is an association consisting of college professors, business representatives and fashion designers. Each year, members submit their original designs to a panel of experts who select the best entries for exhibition at the annual meeting.

This year, Dilworth said, the finalists were judged on innovative use of fabric.

Dilworth was selected as one of three finalists last year when she submitted a wedding dress. The dresses were chosen based upon the design's creativity, she said.

Designs are judged by different elements each year and the faculty do not know what those elements are until the finalists are selected.

Dilworth was the only faculty member who modeled her own design, she said. "I don't know if that meant I was dumber or smarter," Dilworth added.

She has been sewing since she was 7 years old and in high school, got bored with the patterns and started making her own designs for her mother. For 12 years, Dilworth owned a fabric store and served 50 clients.

Gordon Gecko meets Mickey Mantle

Young collectors turn a deaf ear to nostalgia in order to turn a quick buck.

STORY BY J.A. WINDERS

PHOTOGRAPH BY MITCH McGLAUGHLIN

Fourteen years before the turn of the 20th century, Goodwin and Company — a New York-based tobacco company — to promote the lagging sales of their Old Judge brand cigarettes, issued an 11-piece series of artist-rendering cards depicting a baseball team from New York, which would soon be renamed the Giants.

These poorly constructed pieces of cardboard were not exactly children's toys in that they were issued within packs of cigarettes with advertisements placed upon their backs.

The set's current market price is well over $1,500.

More than half century later to promote the sales of their bubblegum, the ambitious Brooklyn-based company called Topps issued an extensive 407-card set portraying players from every major league team in 1- and 5-cent packages of bubblegum.

These higher grade cards are what is considered to be the dawn of children's rabid fascination with collectable cards.

The set's current market price is in the tens of thousands of dollars.

Gone now are the cigarettes, gone now is the gum, but the money making machine is far from gone.

An industry that originated in a product-promotional format has not changed its objective of promoting, it has changed its product.

In 1980, the grandfather of the current card industry, Topps, stood alone in market dominance — as it had since its foundation in 1952.

Now only 13 years later, Topps is strapped within the confines of four of their own domestic sets — not including special editions for both Canada and The United Kingdom — and muddled amongst four other companies with at least 35 separate sets shared between them. This is not even counting the dozen or more scattered independent producers of baseball cards.

"Everybody has cards out now," said Rob Elliott from his downtown Mattoon shop, Elliott SportCards, 1604 Broadway, "and not even half of them are baseball anymore."

Beyond America's pastime, the industry's companies now feature cards of every sport (including British Soccer) and activity conceivable. Cards are graced by everyone from country music stud Garth Brooks (Country Gold Collector Cards) to White House Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater (Desert Storm Collector Set) — odd bedfellows indeed, but now available to grace the collections of any individual.

There is something to be said about being instantly immortalized on a 2-by-3 format, but how far is too far in such a seemingly flexible industry?

When one considers the target market of eight- to 15-year-old children, the price is quite important — kids are not usually financial strongholds.

In 1989 when the industry was making a comeback from both a sales and interest slump, individual packs of cards containing about 15 cards each (exact number varies by one or two depending upon the company) cost 40 cents. Within a four year period the cost of an individual pack of cards (containing the same number of cards) has risen to 69 cents.

"The market is so flooded by stuff right now," commented local card collector and dealer Vernon Owens via phone from his Charleston home. "And the price of it is far out of the reach of the average kid."

Tough times must then call for drastic measures — even if one is 10 years old.

The method many young collectors turned corporate raiders have adopted is that of a clear-thinking stock broker — buy low, sell high.

"These kids study that Beckett (the pricing Bible of the industry) like it was the Wall Street Journal," chuckled Owens. And why not?

Price fluctuations are monthly and quite common. Card prices are almost entirely dependent upon the performance of the player pictured.

So across this nation children avidly tune into ESPN to check into everything from a player's day-to-day performance to an update in their contract negotiations. It is all to get that critical jump on their collecting competition.

"The kids aren't stupid, they know what cards are worth," Elliott said. "They are more up to date than many of the store owners are."

One has to stay a step in front of the pack because it's a dog eat dog world out there — even if one is 10 years old.

This extensive market saturation of little full-colored pieces of cardboard is definitely a contributing factor to this pre-pubescent corporate raiderism.

Owens related that "five or six years ago" when the hobby made its jump back to both financial and nostalgic popularity among the young and the old, "the kids were collecting for the joy of collecting their favorite player."

Now with the market flooding — which is currently running as out of control as the national debt — taking hold of the industry, the kids are "looking for the turnaround in making money."

"I think interest has gone way down," Owens said. "The fad has peaked."

"Peaked," indeed.

Companies are resorting to "out-gimmicking" their competition by releasing anything that collector will clamor for — special limited edition sets, three-pound bronze cards, "stay-fresh" foil wrapping, randomly-packed autographed cards — any spin possible to push their company's head above the crowd.

The companies have turned a predatory eye toward the children's market. They seem to be creating a sense of fevered competition usually found inside the Chicago Board of Trade pits, not the front porches of young children's homes.

"There are a lot of kids in it for the money, but there are kids out there who still collect cards for the cards," Elliott added.

But how can there be, it is a world where one is either the prey or the predator and if one doesn't have the UV-sealed, limited edition bronze set, one just isn't anybody — even if only 10 years old.

Celtics hold off Bullets for win

By The Associated Press

BOSTON - The Boston Celtics, the NBA's hottest team, survived a late Washington surge for their seventh straight win as Reggie Lewis scored 27 points in a 98-93 victory Wednesday night.

The Bullets closed an 83-72 deficit with 10 minutes left to 95-92 with 2:14 to go. But they missed three of four free throws and all four field-goal attempts the rest of the way.

With the score 97-93, Sherman Douglas clinched the win by stealing an inbound pass, then making one of two free throws with nine seconds left.

The Bullets were led by Rex Chapman with 26 points, although he hit no field goals after scoring 21 points in the first half.

Pervis Ellison added 20 points for Washington.

Pistons 112, Mavericks 96

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. - Isiah Thomas scored 20 points as Detroit kept Dallas winless on the road this season in the debut of Mavericks interim coach Gar Heard.

Heard was named to replace Richie Adubato, fired earlier in the day, but it made no difference as Dallas lost its 13th consecutive game and fell to 2-28 for the season and 0-14 on the road.

Terry Davis scored 17 points, including 13 in the first half, and grabbed 14 rebounds for the Mavericks.

Nets 104, Cavaliers 98

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. - Derrick Coleman scored 25 points and New Jersey forced 20 turnovers from usually sure-handed Cleveland.

Kenny Anderson had 23 points, including consecutive jumpers in the final 2:11, to help the Nets post a season-high three-game winning streak at home. The loss was the second in as many nights for the Cavaliers, who got 22 points from Brad Daugherty.

Cleveland, which beat New Jersey in the opening round of last year's playoffs, came into the game as the NBA's best shooting team (.504), best free throw team (.811) and with the second-fewest number of turnovers per game (14.0).

76ers 129, Warriors 122

PHILADELPHIA - Jeff Hornacek scored 22 of his 29 points in the second half of Philadelphia's victory over Golden State.

Rookie Clarence Weather- spoon and Johnny Dawkins each had 28 points for Philadelphia, which played without leading scorer Hersey Hawkins, sidelined with a sprained ankle.

Sarunas Marciulionis, who missed the first 24 games of the season with a broken ankle, had 34 points for Golden State.

Spurs 89, Timberwolves 81

MINNEAPOLIS - Avery Johnson scored a season-high 17 points as San Antonio defeated Minnesota and spoiled the debut of Timberwolves interim coach Sidney Lowe.

The Spurs improved to 9-2 under new coach John Lucas, who replaced the fired Jerry Tarkanian on Dec. 18, and they're 4-0 since Johnson took over as the starting point guard.

Dale Ellis scored 18 points for San Antonio, which won even though Sean Elliott missed all but the first 4:32 with back spasms and David Robinson made only 4 of 15 shots.

Leafs down Blues 4-3

TORONTO (AP) - Bob Rouse made up for two bad plays that led to St. Louis goals by scoring to trigger a three-goal third period as the Toronto Maple Leafs rallied to beat the Blues 4-3 on Wednesday night.

Rouse, the culprit on first-period goals by Brett Hull and Brandon Shanahan, cruised in from the point, took Doug Gilmour's pass and slid a low shot past goalie Guy Hebert at 2:47 of the final period for a 2-2 tie. It was the second goal of the season for Rouse; both have been against St. Louis.

Bill Berg took a pass from Peter Zedel and beat Hebert with a low shot at 8:38 to put Toronto in front for the first time. Jamie Macoun made it 4-2 with his first goal of the season off a point shot at 12:04.

Craig Janney cut the lead to one at 12:26 but the Leafs hung on for their fourth win in a row.

Toronto's Glenn Anderson had his 450th career goal and Gilmour had three assists.

The win gave Toronto 47 points and increased its margin over the Blues in the race for the final playoff berth in the Norris Division to seven points. The Leafs also moved within one point of third-place Minnesota.

Jordan AP's athlete of year

NEW YORK (AP) — After conquering the NBA, Michael Jordan helped conquer the world in 1992.

Basketball's biggest star had his biggest year, leading the Chicago Bulls to their second straight NBA championship, winning his third MVP award and then playing a supporting role as the U.S. Olympic team won the gold medal in Barcelona.

Now, Jordan can add another honor to his 1992 trophy case — Associated Press Male Athlete of the Year.

Jordan is only the fifth man to win the award in consecutive years, joining Joe Montana, Carl Lewis, Byron Nelson and Don Budge.

"It's nice that it's not just a basketball award," Jordan said. "I can cherish it a little more because it's voted on by people who don't necessarily watch basketball that much."

Although basketball is the world's fastest growing sport, it hasn't always been this prominent. Jordan and Larry Bird, the AP's top male athlete in 1986, are the only basketball players to win the award since it began in 1931.

Jordan won by a comfortable margin over a field that included

While it's rare for a basketball player to win the award, it's not for an Olympian. Nine times in 14 Olympic years, the award has been won by stars at the Winter or Summer Games.

Other Olympic winners were Jesse Owens in 1936, Bob Mathias in 1952, Rafer Johnson in 1960, Don Schollander in 1964, Mark Spitz in 1972, Bruce Jenner in 1976, the U.S. hockey team in 1980 and Carl Lewis in 1984.

"Jesse Owens had to overcome a lot of social pressures to succeed at that time," Jordan said. "We have pressure today, but a different kind. It's amazing that he could win an award like this in that social climate."

Despite all his accomplishments, 1992 was a rocky year for Jordan. Questions were raised about his gambling on the golf course, associations with disreputable figures and his decision to limit marketing of his image to products that he has endorsed.

"There were a lot of negatives in 1992, so this will help me remember it in a positive way," Jordan said. "If the Bulls hadn't won, it would have been a down year, on balance. Just winning the Olympics wouldn't have been enough."

Bears looking for Ditka replacement

LAKE FOREST (AP) — Round and round it goes, and who'll wind up coaching who — well, nobody knows.

The Chicago Bears are scrambling for the hot coaching properties in the National Football League; at least one Bears coach has been contacted by another team; and a published report said fired Chicago coach Mike Ditka's name has appeared on the short list of candidates to lead the New England Patriots.

Team president Michael McCaskey, who fired Ditka last week, has asked and received permission to talk to defensive coordinators Richie Petitbon of the Washington Redskins and Dave Wannstedt of the Dallas Cowboys.

McCaskey said he talked to Wannstedt for about 15 minutes over the telephone Tuesday but he would neither confirm nor deny having had contact with Petitbon.

"We're not saying," McCaskey said. "I don't want to keep a running scorecard going about who I talk to and who I don't. Sometimes the word gets out and sometimes it doesn't."

McCaskey has not publicly set a timetable to choose Ditka's successor.

"It's hard to predict," he said when asked if he plans to wait until after the Super Bowl to make a decision. "I just mention that as one possible way it could unfold. Just so people aren't going to think that it is going to be next week, because that is unlikely."

McCaskey conducted a lengthy interview with Bears offensive coordinator Greg Landry on Tuesday. Landry was told he will have a second interview.

Wannstedt, 40, appears to be a hot candidate. He was contacted by the New York Giants on Monday to discuss filing the position vacated by Ray Handley, who was fired at the end of the season.

There's another opening at Denver where Dan Reeves was fired. Denver Broncos owner Pat Bowlen says he has targeted five NFL assistant coaches, four of them defensive coordinators, as candidates for his team's head coaching job, and Wannstedt and Petitbon are among them.

Wannstedt, who was a finalist last year for the job at Pittsburgh that went to Bill Cowher, has been reluctant to discuss his prospects.

"I have just avoided the whole thing because there's nothing at this point," Wannstedt said recently.

Meanwhile, Bill Tobin, director of player personnel for the Bears, has drawn up a list of nine candidates he has given to McCaskey.

Desperate Mavericks fire coach

DALLAS (AP) — Losing 27 of 32 games was not enough to get Richie Adubato fired as coach of the Dallas Mavericks. Lack of player development was.

"The team is going to struggle and we know that because when you go young, it's tough," Mavericks general manager Norm Sonju said Wednesday after Adubato's firing was announced. "We just feel strongly that the development of the players is something we have to have right now," he said.

Sonju and vice president of operations Rick Sund, who went to Detroit Tuesday to fire Adubato, concluded the change was needed and named assistant Gar Heard as interim coach. Sonju added that the 44-year-old Heard would not be considered as permanent coach.

The Mavericks took a 12-game losing streak into Wednesday night's game against the Pistons.

"The bottom line is that my profession is one where you have to win," Adubato said. "I felt we could be competitive, but it was going to take us a little longer than people thought."

Some of the Mavs problems have to do with their failure to sign first-round draft choice Jim Jackson. At the end of December, Jackson turned down a six-year contract, once considered the key stumbling block that led to a stalemate in negotiations.

Jackson also said he would never play for the Mavericks, even if it meant sitting out the year and re-entering the draft.

Team officials also said Adubato should have devoted more time to developing players like Randy White, Doug Smith and Donald Hodge.

"Rick challenged Richie to give Doug 30 minutes every night," Sonju said. "But he's only had eight games so far this season where he's played more than 30 minutes."

Several deals made in baseball

NEW YORK (AP) — Third baseman Chris Sabo and Cincinnati agreed to a $3.1 million, one-year contract Wednesday, while reliever Rob Dibble and the Reds agreed to a $2.5 million one-year deal.

Dibble, 2-5 with 25 saves and a 3.07 ERA, got a $80,000 raise, while Sabo got a $350,000 raise. Sabo hit .244 last season with 12 homers and 43 RBIs.

John Marzano of the Boston Red Sox was the third arbitration-eligible player who agreed to a contract Wednesday, settling with Boston at $350,000, the same salary he made last season.

Several free agents found new teams on a busy day of signings.

The Texas Rangers agreed to a $1 million, two-year deal with outfielder Gary Redus, who was let go by the Pittsburgh Pirates after the season. Redus, who made $25,000 in 1992, will get $500,000 a season. The 36-year-old hit .256 last season with three home runs and 12 RBIs.

Texas also agreed to a one-year contract with reliever Craig Lefferts with an option for 1994. Lefferts was 13-9 with a 3.69 ERA in 27 starts with the San Diego Padres last year and 1-3 and 4.09 in five starts after he was traded to Baltimore on Aug. 31.

Outfielder Todd Benzinger, who became a free agent last month when he wasn't offered a contract by the Los Angeles Dodgers, agreed to a $500,000, one-year deal with the San Francisco Giants, a $650,000 cut. Benzinger hit .239 with four homers and 39 RBIs in 121 games last season.

The Giants also agreed to a minor league contract with outfielder Mark Carreon, who became a free agent last month when Detroit didn't offer a 1993 contract.

Les Lancaster, a 30-year-old right-hander who was 3-4 with a 6.33 ERA last year with the Detroit Tigers, agreed to a $350,000 contract with the St. Louis Cardinals, a $450,000 cut.

Milwaukee designated first baseman Franklin Stubbs for assignment, and Cincinnati sold the contract of second baseman Bill Doran to the Brewers.

Pittsburgh reacts to Lemieux news

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Penguins are adjusting again to life without Mario Lemieux. Despite the discomfiting news he has Hodgkin's disease, Lemieux is getting on with what he hopes will be a long life.

Lemieux, an athlete blessed with an exquisite scoring touch but one touched by unrelenting health adversity, met briefly with his Penguins teammates Wednesday before they left for Thursday's game at Boston.

Lemieux tried to paint a positive picture for his teammates and the media, whom he met with for only a few seconds. He reportedly has already begun radiation treatment for his disease, which attacks the lymph nodes but usually is treatable when detected early.

The NHL's leading scorer and highest-paid player, Lemieux nodded when asked if he was surprised to learn he has cancer, but said, "I'll be fine. No problem."

The Penguins — a team already so touched by trouble that it is known as known as Team Tragedy — said Lemieux is upbeat and determined to beat his illness.

"He feels good about it," said center Ron Francis, who moves to the Penguins' No. 1 line with Lemieux out indefinitely. "It's a blow mentally when someone gets news like this, but he's in real good spirits. He's being positive about this. We wish him the best and hope everything ends up all right."

Team owner Howard Baldwin said every doctor the Penguins have consulted are optimistic because Lemieux's disease was detected in an early stage. An enlarged lymph node was removed after Lemieux detected a lump on his neck.

"It was caught so incredibly early," Baldwin said. "If you catch it very early the way we have, or the doctors have, it's so non-threatening they don't even keep statistics on it."

Cardinals sign former Cub pitcher

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Free agent reliever Les Lancaster and the St. Louis Cardinals agreed Wednesday to a $350,000, one-year contract that allows him to earn an additional $280,000 in performance bonuses.

Lancaster, 30, was 3-4 with a 6.33 ERA last season with the Detroit Tigers. He made 40 appearances, including one start, and led Detroit relievers with 82 innings pitched.

"Les has a strong arm and enjoyed previous success in the National League," Cardinals general manager Dal Maxvill said.

"Our scouts tell us he's healthy and just had one of those years last year. He's a workhorse type of guy who can be used in long relief or as a spot starter. That'll give us more flexibility."

The right-hander began his career in 1987 with the Chicago Cubs. He remained there until just prior to last season. He was 34-23 with a 3.82 ERA with the Cubs.

Panthers romp over Benedictine 79-55

Second straight victory a 'terrible, terrible win'

By DON O'BRIEN
Staff writer

The reaction of Eastern's 79-55 win over Division III Illinois Benedictine Wednesday at Lantz Gym depended on who the source was.

"It was a terrible, terrible win," Eastern starting point guard Johnny Hernandez said. "It's a win, but we played really sluggish and didn't get up like we would for a normal conference game."

Panthers' coach Rick Samuels' viewpoint of his team's fourth win of the year and second in a row differed.

"It was a good win," said Samuels. "We haven't been pretty all year, so there was no reason to be pretty right now. This coach was 3-7 going into the game and is now 4-7. If I was 10-0 going in I might feel a little differently."

The Eagles of Benedictine, who fell to 8-6 on the season, hung with the Panthers throughout the first eight minutes of the game. Samuels then brought in his second team to lift the Panthers with the game tied at 13.

Eastern went on a 15-2 run over the next five minutes to break out to a 28-15 lead. Senior Eric West scored eight of his 12 points over the stretch, Hernandez added a 3-pointer and Andre Rodriguez and Troy Collier added two points each.

"The second group definitely got us going," Samuels said. "They were anxious to get in there and play. They thought that this was their chance."

Everyone got their chance in the Panthers' biggest blow out since an 83-59 thrashing of Division III Elmhurst College to open the 1991-92 season.

The only thing that kept the Eagles in the game was their 3-point shooting. Benedictine connected on 11 of 23 shots from behind the 3-point arc, which accounted for more than half of their points.

"They did a good job in extending our defense," Samuels said. "One of our fears was the possibility that they could have gotten hot (from 3-point range)."

Jordan paced the Panthers with 20 points and seven rebounds. Sophomore Andre Rodriguez came off the bench to add 10 points. Hernandez and Collier added eight points and five assists each.

The Panthers' next game is on the road Saturday at 1:30 p.m. when they play Valparaiso in a Mid-Continent Conference game.

Junior guard Troy Collier (left) brings the ball upcourt as Illinois Benedictine's Eric Green chases. Eastern rolled to a 79-55 win Wednesday night in Lantz Gym over the Division III Eagles and upped its record to 14-1 on the season. Several see action in victory

By KEITH FARROLL
Sports editor

The way Eastern coach Rick Samuels subbed players in and out of Wednesday's win over Illinois Benedictine, the bench scene almost looked like a game of musical chairs.

But playing Benedictine, a Division III school, that scenario was expected. As was the Panthers' 79-55 victory over the Eagles at Lantz Gym. In the game, all 14 players in uniform saw some court action.

But with the Mid-Continent season already on its way, this may be the last time for some of the bench players to see some playing time. And with this extra time in the game against Illinois

Benedictine, some of players opened Samuels' eyes a little bit more, especially the players on Eastern's second team.

"The second group definitely got us going," Samuels said. "They were anxious to get in there and play. They felt this was their chance."

One of the players that Samuels was most pleased with coming off of that second team was Andre Rodriguez. The sophomore forward scored 10 points and grabbed three rebounds in just 13 minutes of playing time.

"Rodriguez is coming out of it," Samuels said. "We need to get him back into our playing rotation."

Also senior Eric West, Eastern's sixth man, helped the Panthers early in the ball game with outside shooting. West had eight first-half points, which included a pair of 3-pointers.

Junior Troy Collier stepped at the point scoring eight points and dishing out five assists.

Freshman starting point guard Johnny Hernandez praised the second team for picking the starting crew.

"We came out real slow couldn't get it going from beginning," Hernandez said. "The second group came in and had a real good job."

Eastern's Louis Jordan led scorers with 20 points and seven rebounds.

The Panthers hit the road Saturday for a conference game against Valparaiso.

Lady Panthers head to Ohio for Mid-Con game

By RYAN GIUSTI
Associate sports editor

The Eastern women's basketball team will try to snap a four-game losing streak Thursday when it plays Mid-Continent Conference opponent Wright State in Dayton, Ohio.

The Lady Panthers (1-9, 0-2) will also be looking to win their first conference game of the season against a Lady Raider team that also dropped their first two league games. Wright State goes into Thursday's game with a 3-8, 0-2 record.

The two teams have another similarity besides identical conference marks, both are very young. The Lady Raiders have five freshmen and five sophomores on their roster and return two seniors.

"They're pretty young, they're starting three sophomores, a freshman and a senior. So we match up youth-wise pretty even with them," said Eastern coach Barbara Hilke.

The Lady Raiders will go with a starting lineup of sophomore Connie Alig and freshman Anita Jurcenko at guards and sophomores Lori Collins and Tracy Nixon at forward. Center Peggy Yingling is the veteran of the group. The six-foot three-inch senior is averaging 11.1 points and 7.9 rebounds per game.

Collins averages 7.5 points and 6.7 rebounds per contest and Alig adds 6.3 points per game.

Hilke said Wright State likes to shoot from behind the three-point arc and will do it often.

A weakness that Hilke said Eastern should be able to hit on is the Wright State defense.

"They're not extremely mobile on defense and we are pushing the ball up with a little more confidence so I think our chances are decent," Hilke said. "It's on the road and it's always tough to try to go in and steal one somewhere, but we have a good chance."

Hilke added that she hopes to have big games out of red-shirt freshman Sharon Pozin and freshman Trenise Crowell. Pozin will get the start at center and senior co-captain Sheriel Brown, the team's leading scorer at 14.2 points per game, will come off the bench. Pozin scored a career high 14 points three games ago against Northwestern and followed that with a 12 point performance against Cleveland State. However she was held scoreless the last game against Youngstown State.

"I would like to see Pozin have a

Trenise Crowell will also be one of the first Lady Panthers off the bench, playing a post position. Freshman Violet Waldner, fresh off an illness, will get the start at one

"We just need a confidence boost right now," Hilke said. "We're hanging in there and attitudes are very outstanding. We're going through the emotional roller coaster of losing that many games. But we are getting better and can see that on the floor."
